PETIT IDOLM@STER

Dengeki Comics EX

PETIT IDOLM@STER

I'm a resident of Osaka who loves drawing, and even when I come to Tokyo, I come in sandals and don't accessorize. The people I meet call me a "trainee monk" every time. I also love animals, scary stories, and fighting games and so I spend my day to day honing my "trainee monk" character.

I'm apparently one of those people who doesn't gain weight, no matter how much I eat, but I'm still weak to physical attacks. So recently, I was once again in the doctor's care for 2 days and 1 night.

I'm kinda obsessed with the first-class green cars on bullet trains. Come to think of it, I don't look like I gained weight.

Lately I've been wishing for more restful sleep, or something like that.

Translation NOTES!

So upon this kiby translator's request,
we have picked up Puchimasu! Yaaaayyyyy! Safe pose \o/

Puchimasu hasn't been updated for quite a while, so we figured, why not? However, as of right now, we are going to be translating from the start of volume 9, so for those of you wishing to catch up to this point, you'll have to search elsewhere for the initial chapters.

As a personal fan of the series, I will be sticking to the style set by most of the previous translators. Namely, I don't have the heart to translate all of the cute little sound effects that all of the puchidols make. For those of you who don't know, each one has a unique, almost Pokemon-esque way of repeating some sound effect, which could be part of their name, or a character trait picked up from their idol counterpart (ie Chibiki speaking Okinawan dialect like Hibiki). The one exception may be Takanya, since she is the only one whose speech changes.
If you want to know any of these little details, feedback is greatly appreciated!
I'll add in some notes!

We look forward to bringing you all the nonsense and cuteness that you've come to expect from our little chibi idols! (食って寝て遊べ! Eat, sleep, play!)
